East Bay scholar's tight-knit family keeps him close to home - CBS San Francisco

It's not uncommon for Students Rising Above Scholars to have close knit, loving families. Ronvel Sharper is no exception. Sharper is living at home with his family as he attends college, and his mom wouldn't have it any other way. Sheila Savannah and her husband keep a close eye on all three of their children. But it's their son Ronvel that she often worries about the most. He made friends with his teachers at Richmond High School and hit the books. By senior year, he was on the honor roll before graduating with four associates degrees from Contra Costa Community College.
